

Take Death, for instance. Your instantaneous reaction may be a shudder, but really the picture contains a story of great hope. The skeleton is like a tree in winter waiting for the coming springtime. This symbolises reincarnation, the fact that each of us dies and is later reborn in a new body and refreshed personality. Or The Tower: this is a symbol of man's pride being humbled—literally, when lightning strikes a building, or figura-

